This ground-floor apartment, set within the iconic 1930s Art Deco curves of Corner Fielde, offers a sophisticated blend of period character and contemporary finish. Entering through a central hallway finished in a moody, modern palette, the property opens into a bright living room where large crittall-style windows flood the space with natural light. The original parquet flooring has been beautifully preserved, running through the principal rooms and grounding the flat in its heritage. The separate kitchen is smartly designed with white cabinetry, wooden work surfaces, and distinctive forest-green tiling. To the rear, the bedroom is a generous double, featuring bespoke built-in wardrobes with geometric detailing that echoes the building's Deco roots. A clean, tiled family bathroom completes the layout. Positioned on the ground floor, the flat offers easy access and a sense of volume that is rare for one-bedroom homes in the area.

Corner Fielde is a landmark building perfectly positioned for the independent cafes, bars, and boutiques of Streatham Hill. Transport links are a major draw, with Streatham Hill station providing direct access to London Victoria and London Bridge, while a short bus ride takes you to Brixton for the Victoria Line. For those seeking green space, the expansive Tooting Bec Common and its famous Lido are within easy reach, offering a peaceful escape from the buzz of the High Road.
