HISTORY & SITUATION

The Roman road out of Aldgate led east towards the original Roman capital of Britain at Colchester, and it remains as a very straight road through Whitechapel, Mile End, Stratford and beyond. The gate stood adjacent to the modern-day Aldgate Square, where Jewry Street meets Aldgate High Street. There was a Roman burial ground outside the wall to the south-east of Aldgate, beside what later became The Minories.

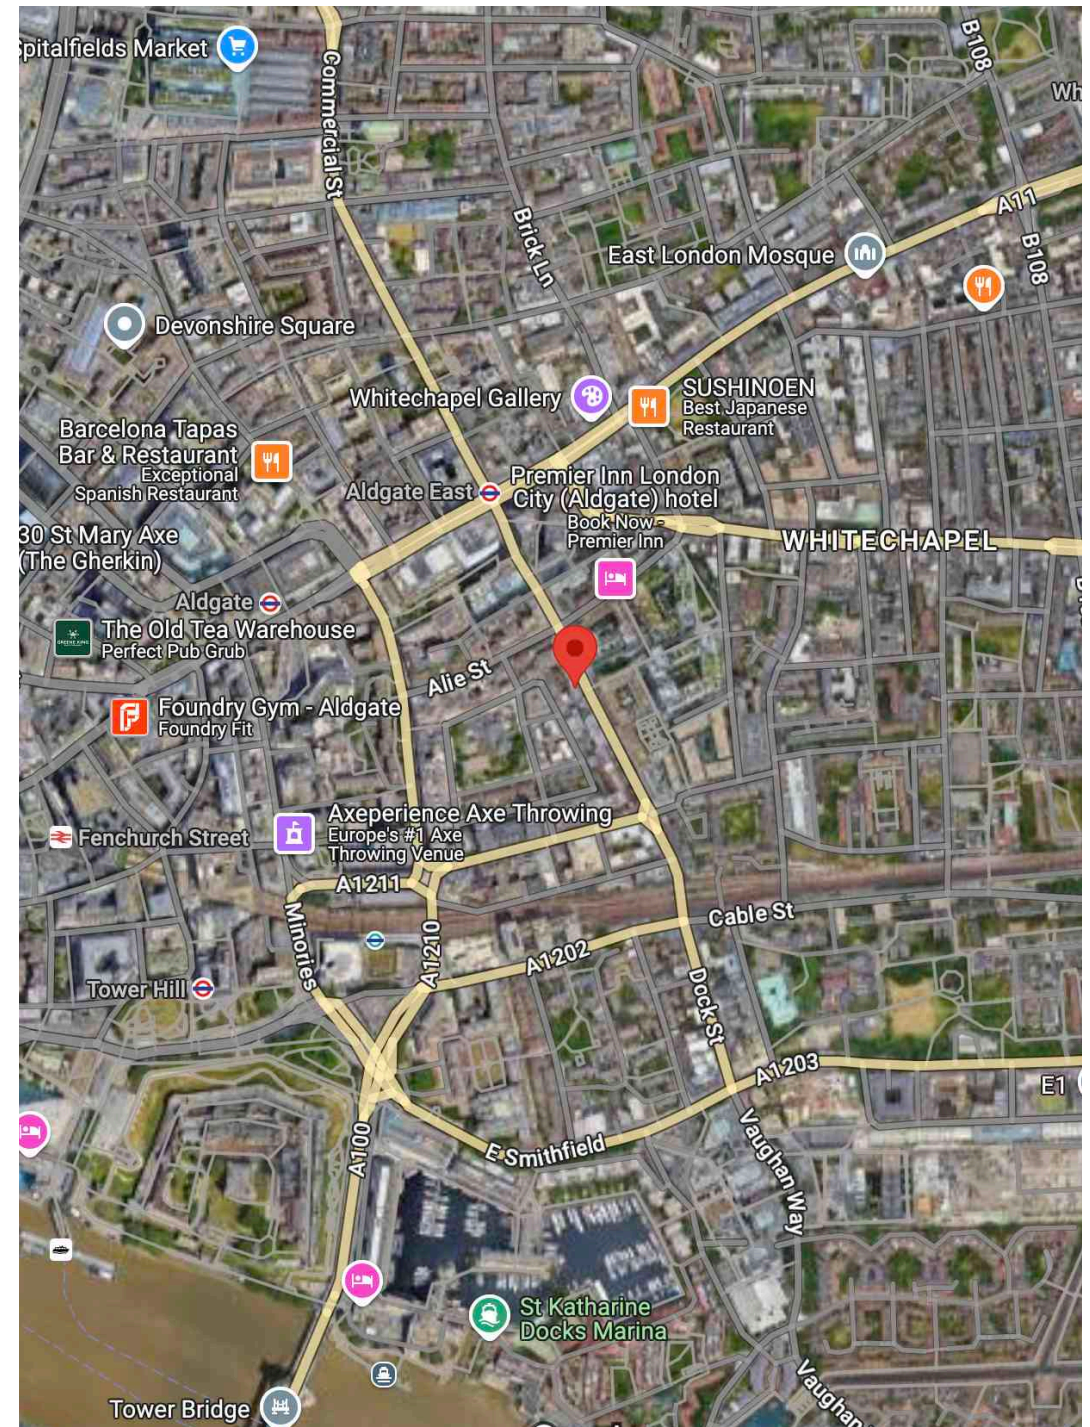

Aldgate East is a lesser-known neighbourhood of London. It can be found near the City's financial centre and is an expanding business sector. It's home to some of London's most modern buildings and well-known monuments and is one of the city's oldest areas. This rapidly developing neighbourhood will place you in the centre of everything London has to offer.

The location also serves to connect Central London with Canary Wharf's business district. It is a perfect example of how the two different commercial hubs are integrated and offers residents a great place to live. The short commute to the City of London makes Aldgate East an attractive feature for those who live in the area.

The neighbourhood is also brimming with culture, with Shoreditch, Old Spitalfields Market, and Brick Lane all within walking distance. All of which are well-known for hosting frequent exhibitions and drawing a large fan base.

Located just a 3 minute walk from Aldgate East tube station, you will find Goodman's Fields. This award-winning area is part of a vibrant and exciting neighbourhood of E1. This lively section of the city has been turned into an exciting destination, full of wonderful restaurants, pubs, cosy coffee shops, gyms, and entertainment. Within walking distance of Tower Bridge and central London, Goodman's Fields can be easily reached by both tourists and residents.

One of East London's newest exciting dining and drinking destinations, the area provides a broad variety of cuisine and flavours, so there is something for everyone. With destination bars and restaurants such as Amber, Bar & Bock Steakhouse, The Leman Street Tavern, Pizza Union, Boom Battle Bar and The Running Horse, the area is awash with opportunity and entertainment.

DESCRIPTION

Numbers 60 – 62 Leman Street is a substantial period-style building with a lift to all six floors, a superior dual aspect and the rare delight of a charming private garden. It arrives to the open market as a superb potential Headquarters close to the City of London.

The Freehold is an impressive example of reproduction Georgian architecture. The property was originally constructed on the site of the Royal Albert Theatre, which was destroyed by fire in 1846 and has enjoyed some notable incarnations to include Leman Street Police Station, a cigar factory and a Working Men's Home, before a comprehensive redevelopment of the site.

The main entrance to the property leads into a grand entrance lobby with vast ceiling heights, part-panelled walls and a large sweeping central stairway with lift access immediately available to all floors.

Having undergone a programme of updating and refurbishment, each floor is similar in specification with a recently installed dual air conditioning system, partial new carpeting, period-style fireplaces and new washrooms and kitchenettes to several levels.

Specific highlights of the accommodation would include a substantial Boardroom with beautifully appointed fittings at Basement level, an utterly charming Courtyard Garden to the rear and some impressive views towards The City with The Gherkin and other landmarks being immediately visible.

Each floor is similar in specification and proportion with fabulous levels of natural light, varied configurations to include private offices and open-plan areas, and has kitchen space at Ground Floor level and, multiple W/Cs and kitchen spaces at ground floor level. The property is presented in almost complete refurbished condition with a number of further upgrades required to finalise the programme of works. We believe the property configures well as an Headquarters office building or a potential medical establishment.
